CAJIPUT OIL.

An East India cure for the Rheumatism.

The essential Oil of the Cajiput Tree a medicine universally esteemed among the East Indians as a safe and certain cure for the Rheumatism, also, for bruises, sprains, fresh cuts, &c. &c.

THE above valuable medicine has but lately been introduced into Europe, in consequence of the tree from which it is produced, yielding its essential oil but in small quantities, and this chiefly monopolized by the government, owing to the great virtue it was found to possess in the cure of the rheumatisms, a disease which the people of that country are particularly subject to: the proprietor, however, receiving information of its virtues in a letter from his friend Mr Jenkins, of the honorable East India company, has procured through him, at considerable expense, a regular supply, and wishing to extend the benefit as well to the poor as to the rich, has divided the original packages and put it up in bottles made for the purpose, with directions round each bottle, signed in the proprietors own hand writing.

PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

JOHN I. SCULL. No. 58.

Tuesday, February 24, 1818.

The progress of the petty war against the Seminole tribe of Indians, is not such as to gratify either the friends of humanity, or the friends of economy in public expenditures. We have seen that a brigade of militia was called for, and ordered out by the Governor of Georgia, to march to the Indian country. Its march is delayed, by the necessity of organizing this raw force: it is impeded afterwards by various obstacles, among which is the deficiency of supplies and of the means of transportation; and now, we learn, before it had arrived within reach of an enemy, the militia-men composing the brigade are returning home, their three months' time of service having expired! Another brigade had been previously ordered out, and is on its way to the frontiers: and, before it can be employed, it is probable, its time of service will also have expired. Thus it frequently happens, when militia are called out for short terms of service, that to march and countermarch is the only service they perform.

In expressing our regret at these facts, we do not certainly undertake to say how the evil could have been avoided, or that it was avoidable. Gen. Gaines, no doubt, found the hostile Indians in greater force than he had anticipated: and, on receiving his representations, it was found necessary not only to clothe him with authority, but also to order forth a thousand men from Tennessee.

It gives us pleasure to be able to state, that there is no room for the intimation we have seen in a Georgia paper, that the general government has neglected to furnish the necessary funds to aid the operation of the forces employed against the Indians. The department of War, we have informed ourselves, has sent to that quarter upwards of thirty thousand dollars for the quarter masters' department, of sixty thousand for the pay department, and of a hundred thousand dollars for the contractor's department. Ample remittances will, no doubt, be made to meet the current expences of the campaign, so soon as the military appropriation bill for 1818 is passed. Meanwhile, the passage of that act has been delayed by the disagreeing votes of the two Houses of Congress, on a particular clause of the bill. The difference is not yet reconciled. One House has already resolved to adhere to its ground. If the Senate follows its example, the whole bill is rejected, and must be originated de novo. We shall in our next, place before our readers the reasoning of the committee of conference of each House on this question.—Nat. Intel.

GOSHEN (N Y) Feb. 10.

A SECOND GENERAL PUTNAM.

The Bear Hunt.—In our last paper we gave a loose account of a bear hunt, collected from transient conversation. Since the publication of that paper we have been requested to give a more particular and correct statement of the transaction—which we do with the greater pleasure, as it affords us an opportunity of recording an instance of persevering intrepidity, rarely to be met with in any individua.

On the 29th January, a bear was caught and taken from its den in Warwick Mountain, after a vigilant search of eight days, by a party of Huntsmen from Warwick. The bear had taken a shelter in a declivity of rocks of about forty feet in depth. Attempts were first made to get him out by smoaking, &c. but without effect. Dogs were then sent into the hole, but they either retreated at his terrific aspect, or were destroyed by his grasp. At length the Huntsmen finding all attempts to frighten him from his retreat fruitless, blew the rocks over the hole, and came within about sixteen feet of the bear. These continued operations made him fierce and terrible.

After the hole blown through the rock was sufficiently large to admit the body of a man, John Ward, jun. crept into it, placed lighted candles fixed upon the end of a pole, towards the bear, and with a musket, shot at him, but without effect.—He descended the second time, and shot him in the fore leg; the bear at each fire advanced towards the mouth of the hole, but Ward was not to be intimidated; he descended again and shot the ferocious beast in one eye. Ward was now drawn out, the bear fiercely following him; he instantly seized a rifle from the hands of another Huntsman, and discharged its contents into the head of the animal, which proved fatal. He measured six feet from the nose to the end of the tail, and weighed three hundred and thirty pounds.

LAKE FISH.

Large sums of money are annually remitted from the western country to the eastern cities for the purchase of salted fish, many of which are greatly inferior to those taken in the waters of Lake Erie. One hundred and sixty barrels of the lake fish have been lately brought to this town and sold for twenty dollars per barrel. They are of an excellent quality, much superior to mackarel. The rivers emptying into the lakes furnish an inexhaustible supply, which may be taken in seines or traps. Twenty seven barrels of fish of a superior quality have been taken in one night in a single trap on the Auglaise. The fall season is the best time to take them for exportation, but they equally abound at all seasons of the year. Those which have been brought here, were taken at Detroit and sent to Erie; from thence to Le Boeuf at the head of French creek by a land carriage of 16 miles. This stream unites with the Allegheny about thirty miles below Meadville, and we believe is always navigable in the month of December. Fish can be brought from Detroit by that route in from four to six weeks.

A company established in this town might supply the whole western country, and we are not a little surprised that such an establishment has never been thought of. It would furnish a very considerable item in our domestic resources. Any plan that can be devised to retain our money at home is entitled to a respectful attention. Our commercial intercourse with the eastern states as at present conducted will forever impoverish us, and every step that is taken to diminish that intercourse will add to the wealth and importance of the west.

FROM LATE LONDON PAPERS.

There is a Monument at Berne, erected to the memory of a most beautiful Woman, who died in childbed. The Lady is represented at the moment of Resurrection; a kind of grove is sunk, sufficient to contain a Statue—in it is placed a large stone, unequally split or broken and so contrived, that the young wife appears rising from her coffin, just awoke from the sleep of death, holding her Child in one hand, and pushing away the stone with the other. The dignity of the figure, her innocence, and the pure celestial joy which shines in her countenance combine to give the whole a most pleasing and sublime expression. The Epitaph is worthy of the Tomb: the Lady is supposed to speak—"I hear the Trumpet! it penetrates to the depth of the Tombs! Awake, Child of Anguish! The Saviour of the World calls us; The Empire of Death is ended, and an immortal Palm will crown Innocence and Virtue.—Behold me, Lord, with the Infant thou gavest me!"

Execution of Vartie, Pearson and Dealtry.

Thursday being the day appointed for the execution of the above mentioned unhappy delinquents, a great concourse of persons assembled in the Old Baily, to witness the last sad ceremonies. Vartie, whose fate has excited the liveliest commisseration and for whom much interest has been exercised, was a young man of much promising talent. He was educated in Scotland and had, by his own industry and application, made very considerable advancement in the dead languages. It will be recollected, that he forged upon Messrs. Williams & Co for 400*l*. which sum he obtained, and proceeded to France, and had with the money entered himself at a College there to study the Hebrew language. He wrote upon the wall of his cell the following lines:

Thou hapless wretch whom justice calls
To breath within these dreary walls;
Know guilty man, this very cell
May be to thee the porch of hell.
Thy guilt confess'd by God forgiven
Mysterious change! it leads to heaven.

DESULTORY GLEANINGS.

The vaults of the Franciscan and Dominican monks of Tolouse were formerly regarded as a wonder, and almost as a miracle. —Every traveller went to visit, with sacred horror, the corpses which were there exhibited as the well-preserved relics of another age; and they came away with the persuasion of having seen excavations which repelled corruption from human bodies. This error long maintained its ground, from respect to the situation: but physical and chemical science has at length betrayed it to the public:—

"These corpses, (says M. Depping, in his Wonders and Natural Beauties of France,) which I admit to be objects of great curiosity, were taken from the graves of the church and the cloisters of the convents in which they had been buried: where the lime slaked during the building of the churches, had acted on them to such a degree as to deprive them of all their volatile particles, and to reduce a body of 150 pounds weight to twelve pounds. M. de Puymarin, who had weighed many of them, found none exceeding that amount: so that 138 pounds had disappeared, without depriving the body of its form, leaving dust impressed within the human figure; the intestines caught fire, and were flexible as tinder; and the brain was reduced to a powder, like saw dust—a singular transformation of the once thinking part of these bodies. The countenance, however, still preserves all its characteristic features. On several the expression of the passions is visibly depicted, while on others the contractions of the muscles exhibits a hideous grin. Maupertuis, in the last year of his life, often visited these vaults, as if to court familiarity with death; and he alledged that these mummies were apparently laughing at the living. A physician attracted by curiosity, was so suddenly affected with the sight of the body and countenance of his father who died 30 years before that he almost expired on the spot: which recalls to my recollection an anecdote that I once read in an old manuscript belonging to the Parisian library. As a party of Gray Friars of Toulouse were talking about ghosts and the spirits of the departed, one of their number boldly assured them that he would forthwith go down, without a light, into the vaults in which the dead bodies were kept. It was agreed that he should make the experiment; and down he went with a knife, which he promised to fix in the ground at the end of the vault. They waited for his return, but the evening passed away without his re-appearing, and on descending with lights, the friars found their brother stretched dead on the floor. Instantly they proclaimed a miracle: but on closer inspection, they perceived that the deceased was attached to the ground by his garments, and were at no loss to divine the manner of his death. Having stooped to put his knife in the ground, he had unconsciously transfixed his gown, in the dark, when he attempted to rise he felt himself detained; and his mind being at that moment filled with all the stories which he had heard about ghosts, he no doubt fancied that one of the dead was punishing his temerity, he was seized with horror and died from fear."

That this story, whether true or apocryphal is recorded in a manuscript preserved in the library at Paris, we presume not to deny; but we have heard it referred to a city very remote from Toulouse.—

A DUTCHMAN.

At Basil, says Dr Moor, when at table I expressed to a Strasbourg acquaintance my regret, that I could not speak a little Dutch, to enjoy the conversation of a Dutchman my neighbour. It was immediately translated to him, he heard it with great composure, took his pipe from his mouth and made the following answer, That I ought to console myself; for, as we had no connection or dealings together, our conversing could not possible answer any purpose.

In the lexicon of Suidas is the following sublime passage, which describes the genius and talent of the great father of ancient philosophy. The fine turn of the expression carries with it evident proof of its originating from some Greek writer of the purest ages. "Aristotle was the secretary of Nature, and he dipped his pen in MIND."

When Bajazet, after his defeat, was carried into the presence of Timur Lench, that is, Timur the Lame, vulgarly Tamerlane, that monarch burst into a laugh on perceiving that Bajazet had but one eye. The Turk who could ill brook such rudeness, said fiercely, you may deride my misfortunes, Timur; but remember that they might have happened to you. The disposal of kingdoms is in the hands of God; and they depend on his will. Timur, replied with equal haughtiness, I agree with your observation, and I did not laugh at your misfortune, but at a reflection that just occurred to my mind, how little value thrones and sceptres possess in the judgement of God, who has taken a kingdom from a man with one eye, to give it to another with one leg.

Dr. William Balfour, an eminent physician in Edinburgh, in the month of June 1814, completely succeeded in reuniting a finger which had been cut off by a hatchet. It had been separated from the hand at least 20 minutes, and when sent for by Dr. Balfour, was found to be as cold as any other inanimate substance; the blood was washed off with cold water and the wounded surfaces brought in close contact, and retained in that position for about ten days, when it was observed that reunion had taken place, and in a short time after the functions and sensations of the finger were perfectly restored. This highly interesting case is so well authenticated that the greatest sceptic cannot doubt the facts contained in it. In January 1815, Mr. Bailey of Thetford, performed a similar cure by the same means. These two cases establish the principle that fingers and toes, although entirely cut off, ought not to be considered as lost, for they will unite if treated in the manner just mentioned. Dr. Balfour's case is, perhaps, the first on record where, after entire separation, complete reunion has taken place. He has the great merit of being the first who has put the powers of nature to the test in this way, and all his expectations have been realized.—Dr. Balfour appears to have been perfectly acquainted with the curious work of Taliacotius on the art of ingrafting noses, and the method practised by the Hindoos, from time immemorial, of replacing that part of the human face, as detailed in the Asiatic Researches, and in the Gentleman's Magazine for 1794. Mr. Carpue, a celebrated surgeon of London, last year, introduced the Hindoo practice to his countrymen, and has actually succeeded in the first attempt he made of replacing the nose on the face of an officer who had lost it in foreign service. Where the part of the nose cut off cannot be found in time to be replaced according to Balfour's plan, deformity may still be removed by the ingenious practice of the Hindoos.—Those who wish further details on this very curious and interesting subject are referred to the 5th vol. of the Eclectic Repertory, to the Asiatic Researches, and to Mr. Carpue's publication, which no doubt has reached the United States before this time.

PITTSBURGH.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1818.

A law has passed the Legislature of Maryland, taxing the United States' Branch Bank fifteen thousand dollars per annum, or compelling it to use state stamps.

The committee on Cobbett's claim have reported a resolution that it ought to be granted.

The U. S. Bank committee, have reported a bill for taxing that institution in this state.

The present symptoms are strongly indicative of a war with Spain. The adored Ferdinand thinks himself backed by England and Russia; and they will both make him repose in that opinion, until the storm breaks upon his head, when they will desert him, and he will find himself looed. Both England and Russia will promote hostilities between the United States and Old Spain, with the hope of a rich harvest of trade as neutrals during the contest; and drawing to their ports the commerce of South America when its inhabitants shall have become independent. The "Spanish bull" at Washington will very probably get his master into a scrape, that will cost him all his American provinces.

UNPLEASANT INTELLIGENCE.

Office of Georgia Journal,
Milledgeville, Jan. 30.

An express from Gen. Gaines to the Executive, reached here this morning, with the following unpleasant intelligence.

Head Quarters Hartford, Ga. Jan. 28, 1818.

SIR—I have just now received a letter from William Harris, Esq. of Telfair, containing the painful intelligence of the massacre of Mr Daniel Dikes and his family, by a party of Indians, on the St. Tilla, 40 miles from Telfair court-house.—Mr. Harris adds, that there was reason to apprehend some other families have fallen near the residence of Mr. Dykes. I have ordered a detachment of cavalry to that frontier, to pursue the Indians as far as practicable.

A detachment of Col. Wimberly's regiment of Infantry will be sent down the Flint on the Indian side, towards the Big Pond, with orders to reconnoitre the country, and arrest or attack any parties found in that quarter.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. P. GAINES, Maj. Gen. com'dg.

His Excellency, WM. RABUN.

Gen. Jackson, in a letter to Gov. Rabun, (received yesterday,) states that he has instructions from the Secretary at war, to repair to the scene of Indian warfare and take command, with authority to call out from this state, and those adjacent to it, such force as wil speedily put an end to the war.

The Milledgeville Journal of the 27th ult. states that Gen. Gaines is fully authorised to pursue the hostile Indians even into the Spanish territory, and attack them, unless they shelter themselves under a Spanish post.

NEW-YORK LIBERALITY.

The Common School Fund, provided for by the state of New York, amounts to 360,000 dollars. The Legislature has also appropriated 72,268 for the Botanic Garden; 204,548 for the Colleges; and authorised the raising of 480,400 by Lotteries; 5000 are annually paid to the College of Physicians and Surgeons; and 65,000 are appropriated to the Regents of the University. The above liberal measures are the aggregates of the grants, of different Legislatures; and near three-fourths of the Lottery money has been raised.

A new article of exportation.—A letter from New-York, says, "Very few tickets in the Baltimore Surgical Lottery remain unsold. They have been bought and sent to the Havana."

CHEROKEE INDIANS.

Extract of a letter from a respectable gentleman to the editors of the Georgia Journal dated.

Rossevill, Cherokee Nation, Jan 4, 1818.

"It is due to the Cherokees to say, that the communication made through the medium of your paper, relative to their disaffected people forming an Alliance with the Seminoles, is entirely incorrect. No correspondence whatever has been known to exist between this nation and the Seminoles; consequently nothing of their warlike intentions or preparations were known to the Cherokees, until announced in the papers, or through the medium of travelling white people, or friendly Cowetaws. The disaffected Cherokees (if there are any) must be in their own country, and their dispositions known to no other person, but themselves, as none have left this country to seek an asylum amongst other tribes. To depart from the principles of the nation on the approach of war, would be considered as a capital offence, no person, therefore, dare make their disaffection public, or their conduct scrupulous—moreover the Cherokees are ever disposed to do away all suspicions of their fidelity, and to convince the adjoining states, by their actions, that they are true friends to the United States—Shudenwah, of High tower, a Cherokee chief of distinction, is now raising warriors to co-operate with Gen. Gaines, to chastise the Seminoles."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.

The House of Representatives begin to proceed expeditiously. In the course of yesterday they gave the coup-de-grace to the resolutions offered by Mr. Johnson, of Kentucky, early in the session, for providing for the widows of regular soldiers killed in battle; for donations of land to the disbanded officers; for establishing three additional military academies; for organizing a corps of invalids; for reducing the peace establishment to 8000 men; and for giving a small additional compensation to the officers of the army.

It is not a subject of regret, perhaps, that these propositions were not debated, since their fate seemed to have been foreseen yesterday, even by the mover: and the disposal of them has cleared the way for other topics of great importance, before the House; among which, besides business of course and incidental business, may be mentioned the uniform bankrupt bill; the expatriation bill; the Georgia claim for militia services; the Massachusetts claim for ditto; the report on internal improvements; the judiciary subject; the bill to provide for the punishment of crimes against the United States; the bill for the organization of the militia; the question respecting the disputed seats of members, who held offices since their election, and a long list of et-ceteras.

A military correspondent, who has lately been in Canada, states that, from the most accurate estimate he was enabled to make, the British military force in the Canadas and Nova Scotia, exceeds the aggregate of the army of the United States, as reported to Congress by the Executive at the close of the year 1817

MOBILE, Dec. 20.

It is with extreme satisfaction that we announce, that generals Clauzel and Lefebvre Desnouettes, have purchased in Mobile, and will probably make it their permanent residence; they have also purchased for marshal Grouchy and general Lallemand. General Clauzel stays with us this winter; general Desnouttes, proceeds for the White Bluff. This will be a great addition to our society and active capital and we feel gratified, that such distinguished foreigners should give such a decided preference to Mobile over the contemplated city of Blakely.

Barbarism of Law.—There are at this time, in Westminster Abbey, England, two unburied coffins, containing the remains of two foreign Ambassadors, who were attached for debt after their decease.—So say their own writers.

SALEM, (R. I.) Feb. 7.

A town has been incorporated in Maine by the name of MONROE. Its position, near our frontiers, in the county of Hancock, and next to that of Washington, is just where the patriotism and vigilance of Mr. Monroe will place him in our history.—We are glad to see him near Governor Brooks, in such good company, and in such honourable defence. Hampden is not at a great distance.

WEATHER.—It may give to our northern brethren some notion of the variability of our climate, when we state that on Tuesday and Wednesday week our gardeners were planting their peas, and the weather so mild that the frogs were singing in the swamps and meadows. On Friday it began to snow, and although falling on ground both warm and wet, before it ceased on Saturday it had covered the ground to the depth of 12 inches. On Monday it began to rain, and did not cease until Tuesday. To day there are scarce any remains of the snow; the earth being bare in all places where the sun has had full power. Thus within one week, we may say that we have experienced the temperature of every season of the year—as although the snow does not remain, the severe frosts have given us plenty of ice.

Raleigh (N. C.) Minerva, Feb 6.

Private Competition a public benefit.—The former fare for a passenger in the old mail coach between Philadelphia and New-York was ten dollars; the post chaise started to run the same route at seven dollars; the mail coach, with a guard in true London style, then reduced the fare to five dollars; but as soon as the post chaise saw this they advertised to do it for four dollars at which price passengers can now go to Philadelphia a distance of nearly 100 miles, and back for the same. But we would advise gentlemen intending to visit Philadelphia if their business will admit a little delay, to postpone their journey a few days when it is certain, according to the rules of arithmetical progression, that they will not only be carried free of expence at all, but provided with the best of good living by the way, for the sole honor of riding in one coach in preferenee to the other.

[E. Post.]

Commonwealth vs. John Cochran.

This case was tried here on Thursday last. Cochran was found guilty on two several indictments,—the one for breaking open the trunk of David M'Cullough and stealing therefrom 18 dollars in money—the other for stealing the horse of Dr Prather. He was sentenced on the former to two, and on the latter to three years' confinement in the Penitentiary at Philadelphia.

It may give some idea of the readiness and satisfaction with which devils accuse each other, to state a conversation which, took place in presence of several persons in our jail, between Cochran and Tiernan. Cochran, when committed, was ushered into the same apartment of the prison in which Tiernan, who had been taken the day before, was chained. Tiernan immediately accosted him thus: "Well, I understand you are the fellow who stole my saddle [the same which Tiernan had stolen from Campbell]—"Yes," said Cochran with bitterness, "they told me I had taken the saddle of the man who committed the horrid murder up the road the other day!"—Green. Gaz
